Merger of American-Standard, Mullins Manufacturing Proposed

The boards of directors of American Radiator and Standard Sanitary corporation and Mullins Manufacturing corporation have agreed to a merger to approval by the stockholders of both companies, a joint statement issued by Joseph A. Grazer, president of American-Standard, and George E. Whitlock, chairman of the board of Mullins Manufacturing corporation, disclosed today. Special meetings of American-Standard and Mullins Manufacturing corporation stockholders will be held in New York city on January 27, 1956, to vote on the proposal. If the vote is favorable, the papers making it effective will be filed shortly thereafter. "This merger will put American-Standard into the specialized kitchen market," Grazer said. "This move will provide the financial resources enabling us to meet the demands of the new kitchen market and will permit us to increase and stabilize employment," Mr. Whitlock said. The agreement calls for Mullins Manufacturing corporation to become the Youngstown Kitchens division of American-Standard.
